

8th ASIAN-OCEANIAN SYMPOSIUM ON PLANT LIPIDS

Canberra, Australia, 19-22 November 2019

Invitation

Join us next year in Australia's Bush Capital for ASPL2019.

Canberra, the capital of Australia, nestled within a beautiful Australian bush environment, was chosen “the best place to live in the world” by a survey of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development in 2014. It is a well-planned city, close to the famous beaches of the southern NSW coast, mountains with winter snowfields, award-winning wineries, wild life and a large multicultural diversity within the city itself. Canberra International Airport is a 50-minute flight away from Sydney and connected by regular direct flights to Singapore and Doha. November springtime in Canberra is mild, with an average temperature close to 20°C. Enjoy our bush capital together with plenty of kangaroos and other unique wildlife in wild!

The Organising Committee promises an exciting scientific program on plant lipid topics.
